

Loren Mulraine "See In Me"

Words and Music by Loren E. Mulraine
© Mulraine Publishing (BMI)

Turned the water to wine then healed the nobleman's son
Just a wave of Your hand and the storm was done
Just a touch to the blind man's eyes and he could see
Told the man at the pool, take up your bed and walk
Touched the one who was dumb and suddenly he could talk
Just a moment in Your presence, and the demons they had to flee

And I wonder what you see in me, miracle I need you'll be Lord you are the potter, and I am the clay you seek
And I wonder what you see in me, shattered as I seem to be
You are the healer, mending every broken piece

In your heavenly place, only beauty abounds
All the angels crying holy as they cast their crowns
Full of awe and wonder as they worship at your feet
With the walls of jasper and the city of gold
Every kind of precious stone, what a sight to behold
None of that can compare to the blessed trinity (Holy, Holy, Holy)

And I wonder what you see in me, grain of sand I seem to be
But you are the shepherd and you care for every sheep, even me

If I had ten thousand tongues, I could never say enough, You are the holy one
Love without condition, for such a wretch undone

And I wonder what you see in me, broken though I seem to be
But you are the potter, and I am the clay you seek
And I wonder what you see in me, broken though I seem to be
But you are the potter, and I am the clay you seek

Loren Mulraine - Lead & Background Vocals, Acoustic Guitar, Acoustic Piano, Keyboards, Bass, Strings; Mike Alleyne -
Drum & Percussion Programming; Janar Harbour - Electric Guitars